

Daniel E. Choi, MD
Board of Directors & Founding Member

Dr. Daniel E. Choi is a fellowship trained orthopaedic spine surgeon at Long Island Spine Specialists, P.C. in New York. He is originally from Arcadia, California and earned his undergraduate and medical degrees through the prestigious Honors Program in Medical Education (HPME) at Northwestern University. He completed an orthopaedic surgery residency at Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey and subsequently completed a combined neurosurgical and orthopaedic spine surgery fellowship at Harvard Medical School. His interests include minimally invasive spine surgery, robotic spine surgery, telemedicine, and organized medicine. He is passionate about using social media to encourage collaboration and community amongst physicians and physicians in training. He is highly involved with the Medical State Society of NY and serves as the current Young Physicians Section Chair as well as treasurer of the Suffolk County Medical Society. In his free time, he loves spending time with his newborn daughter and exploring everything Long Island and NYC has to offer.
